Trying to encourage people with disabilities and their families and help them that there is always hope for something better and help them understand that being different is acceptable. now feel that i have a great goal in my life!

I have to give all my passion to people that need my help!

I spread this message to all young people and try to make them think more about others. I am searching for the next project i'd like to apply to participate in. I started learning two new foreign languages!

I am trying to organize some volunteer services for children refugees.

Additionally i feel kind of unsatisfied with my current job, that is kind of irrelevant with the topic, and except of volunteering now i feel that i want to have a job that let help people and make something good for our world! Generally i feel that a whole new world is in
